During the cold months in New York, aesthetes know there's no better place to catch great design than the Park Avenue Armory. Between October and January, several fairs bring the best in art, antiques, and design to the historic Upper East Side venue. One perennial favorite is the Salon Art + Design, which focuses on furniture and design from the 19th through 21st centuries. Running November 8 through 12, this year's iteration—the seventh—is set to be the best yet. Fifty-six galleries from 11 countries will show wares ranging from Art Nouveau furniture to contemporary art—all of which is sure to be presented in thoughtfully outfitted booths. "Few fairs today include the range of both fine and decorative arts found at the Salon," says executive director Jill Bokor. "Recognizing the desire of collectors and interior designers to create environments rather than simply amass objects, the Salon exhibitors are chosen for their precise and creative way of presenting material that both predicts and reflects trends in the international culture of living. Ultimately, the Salon is curated on the premise that collectors and designers insist on a vibrant, uncommon array of styles, materials, and periods as long as the quality is impeccable." AD PRO got an exclusive look at the participant list. Below, the 30 international and 26 U.S. galleries showing at this year's Salon (new exhibitors are marked with an asterisk).
